Susie Valdez

Chair and Professor/Department of Child Development & Ed. Studies

Santa Ana College

Susie earned her Master’s Degree in Psychology with an emphasis in Development of Young Children. She has spent over 20 years working in the field of early care and education, including teaching and directing a licensed and accredited high quality child development center. As a college professor, Susie now focuses on educating early childhood professionals. She serves on several local and state committees, and has worked with a wide variety of agencies and organizations throughout the country as a presenter/trainer, grant writer, and program evaluator. She is the founder and president of One Great Town, a small company that provides learning opportunities and supports collaboration for early care and education professionals. She lives in Long Beach with her partner, Liz, and their two dogs, Aristotle and Kodi. When they are not RV traveling, she participates in a black belt club, plays basketball, practices her guitar, or pairs an excellent glass of wine with an awesome book.
